He picked us up. Fear of knowledge, change, and what may come next From both sides of the aisle, right and left Mother help us we walk along in confusion Pointing fingers, spewing hate filled abuse and Forgetting to speak of love for fear of rejection Father help us we ask your protection There's more to learn if only we allow it We should listen to more than just those who shout the loudest Even jesters garner much attention And are showered with affection But their ideas are farcical and dilute If one but tried they are simple to dispute Die not with fear in your heart Remember courage requires fear to start To defeat our burgeoning ignorance We must supplant our living indifference.
